

Harvard University. The Department of Romance Languages and Literatures seeks to appoint a tenure-track assistant professor in Latin American literary and cultural studies. Written and spoken fluency in both Spanish and English is essential, while knowledge of Portuguese and/or an indigenous language is desirable. The appointment is expected to begin on July 1, 2010. A strong doctoral record is required. Candidates should demonstrate an active record of research and publication, especially those who have already received the PhD, as well as excellence in teaching. Teaching duties include four courses a year at both the undergraduate and graduate levels as well as advising undergraduate and graduate theses. Please send a cover letter, a CV, teaching evaluations, at least three letters of recommendation, an abstract of the dissertation and/or other major publications, and a writing sample of no more than 30 pages to departmental administrator Mike Holmes, Latin American Search Committee, Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138. Materials should be postmarked by November 2, 2009. Harvard is an Affirmative Action, Equal Opportunity Employer. Applications from women and minorities are strongly encouraged.